

Cory Brown

December 15th, 2018

Professor Elisabeth von Uhl

In the beginning, I dreaded taking another english composition class, because I had already complete the requirements in a different school. However when I transferred my credits didn't switch over. Going into this class I thought I already knew everything there was to know about grammar and punctuation. My attitude toward this course was negative. Later on in this course I realized that I learned something new all the time. The content in this course went very into depth about grammar and punctuation, unlike my previous english courses. Everything from was explain with examples and revisions. From where and when to place a comma, to how to use a semicolon, etc. I don't like the fact that my attitude was negative going into this class. I believe that it hindered me from doing my best. It wasn't until later that I understood that I need to put in maximum effort. With that being said I did gain a lot of knowledge and feel like I know a lot more about grammar and punctuation. I will try my best to use my new found knowledge and apply it to everyday life. Writing is important and it is used in everyday life. This course challenged me to pull out the most I could when writing papers. For example when I had to do the research paper on The Grange I was shocked. I did not think you could do much research on an average bar. Being a student in college, I'm sure that I will continue to improve my writing and reading skill, as there is no limit. I did enjoy meeting new people in this course. It was interesting to see new people and listen to their thoughts and opinions that was discussed in class. I believe everyone who participated in this course started off as caterpillars and has now become beautiful butterflies.